PRESS RELEASE

A Unique Holiday Gift

Des Moines, Iowa, 11/02/08 -- Looking for a unique last minute Christmas gift for the family that has everything?

Perhaps they don't have everything. Sources estimate that as many as 85 percent of U.S. adults have not created wills or estate plans of any kind. People without wills have no way to control how their property will be divided after their death or who will care for any minor children who survive them. Rather, those decisions are made by probate judges who likely follow strict rules which vary from state to state.

Here's an interesting way to make sure those important decisions are taken care of: Give them the gift of a will. It's easily done online through GayWill.com.

1. Have your friend establish an account at GayWill.com and enter his/her estate planning preferences.
2. When the diagram created reflects your friends' estate planning wishes, you can then use the "Notify Us" button from GayWill.com to log in to the account and enter your credit card information. Estate planning documents will be sent to the email address on the account. Instructions for properly signing and witnessing the documents are also included.
