PRESS RELEASE

Take care of legal business Even if there's no lawyer in town

Des Moines, Iowa, 10/02/08 -- With almost one million attorneys in this country today, it would seem like there are enough to go around, but in rural areas, that may not necessarily be true. Even if there are lawyers in your town, they may not be well versed in specific areas of law. In fact, most lawyers do specialize, and even so-called "general practitioners" aren't necessarily the best choice for every legal need, and they probably don't understand the specifics of gay issues.

Yet, there comes a time in everyone's life when you need to take care of important personal business, such as doing a will, a living will, or a medical or financial power of attorney. Those documents are especially important as a way to protect your partner in a time of need. But how do you choose the right lawyer when there is no one in town who specializes in estate planning? How do you protect your rights, even if your state doesn't recognize your civil liberties? Do you travel to a distant city, despite the inconvenience? The solution may be simpler than you think.

"I started to think about a will when my grandfather died and my partner lost her mother, all within a month" said Janine Wyatt of Remington, California. "But I don't know a lawyer, and somehow the prospect of finding and meeting with one seemed daunting. Then a friend of mine recommended GayWill.com. I checked it out and that's all it took for me to get that huge task taken care of. It was so easy and I was relieved that I was able to finally protect my partner the way I needed to."

But how do you know you can take the leap of faith to use an online legal service? GayWill.com was developed by attorneys with years of experience in estate planning for thousands of clients. It was created through the work of the founding attorney and his brother, who is gay. Together they were able to create documents that specifically address the needs of gay people. Located in Des Moines, Iowa, the office is available to answer your questions and get the job done right. Support is available with email at support@gaywill.com or by calling toll-free at 866-258-5104.

But why should you do your will on the Web? Consider the advantages:

1. It's convenient – it requires only that you have access to the Internet.
2. It saves the hassle of trying to locate an attorney in your town or having to drive to another town.
3. It saves you from having to take time out of a workday to have a meeting. You can do it from the convenience of your own home any time.
4. You can find a specialist in estate planning who is up-to-date on the changing estate tax laws.
5. It can be less expensive than meeting with a lawyer face-to-face.
6. It's legal, safe and private.

“Doing these documents online really saved me time and the hassles of not knowing any lawyers who specialize in estate plans,” said Wyatt. “I chose GayWill.com because it was a high quality product that was easy to use and it was a reputable company with excellent credentials.”

The founding attorney of GayWill.com is an expert in estate planning, tax and business fields of law. Based in Iowa, W. Kendall Brown is a member of the American, Iowa and Arizona Bar Associations and has a prestigious AV rating. The rating identifies an attorney with preeminent legal ability. It is a reflection of expertise, experience, integrity and overall professional excellence. The rating indicates that the individual has demonstrated the highest professional and ethical standards. Brown received his bachelor's degree in physics from California Institute of Technology and he graduated with a J.D. degree in law from the University of Colorado, receiving the Order of the Coif, which recognizes outstanding academic achievement in the top 10 percent of the class.

“GayWill.com provides a service that I had no idea existed on the Internet, yet it gave me everything I needed. Being able to take care of my will online was the perfect solution,” said Wyatt. “The other great thing is that it's legal in my state and all states.”

GayWill.com is designed to meet the legal needs of all 50 states and to intuitively ask the questions it needs to ask when preparing a will, no matter where you are. It provides legal, complete, wills, living wills, and other documents that are easy to update on a secure web site. The finished product is immediately emailed to you to be signed, notarized and put in a safe place.

So, if you only know lawyer jokes, but no lawyers, you can still get your important business taken care of through a professional legal service that addresses specific rights for gay people, located in all rural areas – through your computer. Let your PC take the burden of meeting with a lawyer, while you relax with your partner.
