PRESS RELEASE

Spring Cleaning For The Soul

Des Moines, Iowa, 03/11/09 -- Spring may put you in the mood to clean up the piles of clutter, organize that closet or plan a garage sale, but that feeling of renewal gained from getting your life organized will not be complete until you take care of a nagging piece of personal business you may have left undone.

An estimated 85 percent of Americans have not specified in a will where their money, property, and perhaps most importantly, their kids, would go, if something were to happen.

“There are a lot of reasons why people haven’t done their wills, but none of those make any difference if your loved ones are left to sort it all out without you,” said W. Kendall Brown, estate attorney. “Everybody knows it’s important, but nobody likes to do it.”

Yet, if you don’t take care of your children, your assets and your medical care wishes, some of the most important decisions of your life could be randomly made for you through the courts, following whatever laws are in your state, or worse yet, could leave your family arguing for years.

“It’s an easy thing to procrastinate about, and yet, it’s kind of like cleaning drawers. Once it’s done, it feels really good to know you have set your wishes in binding, legal documents that clearly specify what you want.” said Brown.

Yet, finding and meeting with an attorney who specializes in estate planning probably isn’t at the top of your priority list. There may not even be one in your town. Fortunately, there is a solution that can make your will preparation as simple as logging on to the Internet.

YourWebWill.com is a fully interactive, confidential web site developed by attorneys with years of experience in creating wills, health care and estate planning documents for thousands of clients. The web site allows you to create a will and other key documents from the convenience and privacy of your home in 15 to 30 minutes. It meets the legal requirements in all 50 states.

Brown recommends spending some time thinking through a few key issues before starting YourWebWill.com:

- Think about specific items you might want to leave to specific people.
- Think about who the best guardians would be for underage children and talk with those family members or friends about the decision.
- Decide who would best be able to handle overseeing the distribution of your property and talk with that person about it.
- Consider when you'd like to have your underage children receive their inheritance. It can be done over a number of years or at specified ages. The program walks you through how to set this up.
- Think about health care decisions such as who can make medical decisions on your behalf.

YourWebWill.com will walk you through the necessary questions and within moments of completing the program, you receive your documents ready for signatures by you, three witnesses and a notary public. All that is done for you at a fraction of the cost of meeting with an attorney.

The confidential program takes care of writing the legally binding documents. Getting the signatures from witnesses who are not named in the will and keeping the paperwork locked in a safety deposit box are the final two steps.

Once you have your will completed, take a moment to relish crossing this important task off your to-do list and know that you've taken an important step toward securing the future of your family. You can clean the closets next week.
